

William C. Mumby

Wil Mumby concentrates on environmental and Native American law and policy matters. He advises on a broad range of issues arising from energy, transportation, water, and other development projects, including litigation in federal and California courts.

He has particular expertise on California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA) matters, including technical issues relating to air quality, transportation, water resources, climate change, noise, and historic and cultural resources.

An active member of the firm's Native American law and policy group, Wil helps advise tribal clients on a broad range of environmental, land use, and economic development issues, including fee-to-trust acquisitions.

Prior to joining the firm, Wil clerked for Judge Harold E. Kahn and Judge Ethan P. Schulman in the San Francisco Superior Court's Law and Motion Department.

During law school, Wil helped lead Karuk-Berkeley Collaborative Legal, a joint project of Berkeley Law and the Karuk Tribe that developed strategies to protect the Klamath River and its salmon population. He also served as Co-Editor-in-Chief of Ecology Law Quarterly, and clerked for Sierra Club, Natural Resources Defense Council, and U.S. Department of Justice, Environment and Natural Resources Division.

Professional and Civic Activities / Awards

- Member, California Lawyers Association, Environmental Law Section
- Recipient, Certificate of Specialization in Environmental Law
- Recipient, Certificate of Specialization in Public Interest & Social Justice

Associate

San Francisco Office
628.209.4153
wmumby@kaplankirsch.com

Areas of Practice

Environment, Public Lands, and Conservation
Native American Law

Education

J.D., University of California, Berkeley School of Law, 2018
B.S., with distinction, University of California, Berkeley, 2013

Bar & Court Admissions

California