

KAPLAN KIRSCH ROCKWELL

National Western Center Redevelopment

Kaplan Kirsch & Rockwell represents the City and County of Denver, Colorado, in developing and negotiating the governance structure and framework agreements for expanding and redeveloping the current home of the National Western Stock Show into a new, 270-acre, state-of-the art multipurpose campus. This redeveloped facility will continue to house the National Western Stock Show; serve as a hub for year-round creative and experiential educational, research, and commercial activity that promotes, supports, and helps to preserve the western lifestyle while highlighting innovation and global issues of health, food systems, food security, water, and the environment; and provide an attractive environment for additional agricultural business and science investments that position the state as an agricultural innovations cluster leader. The Firm also represents the City in rail relocation issues associated with the redevelopment project.

Related Practices

Intergovernmental Agreements
Project Development
Public Financing for Infrastructure
Public-Private Partnerships
Rail, Transit, Highways, and Infrastructure

Contact

Stephen Kaplan
303.825.7000
skaplan@kaplankirsch.com